ABSTRACT

Designed to document the research activities of the librarians of the State of New York University (SUNY), this bibliography of publications has been compiled for three primary reasons: (1) to provide a tangible record of the depth and breadth of knowledge, interests, and expertise represented within their ranks; (2) to provide a mechanism which encourages SUNY librarians to share with each other their research interests and accomplishments; and (3) to update the last bibliography, which was compiled in 1975. It is noted that the bibliography--which contains more than 700 items, most with annotations--is based on information received from SUNY librarians in response to a 1987 mailing which requested citations for publications. The scope of the bibliography is as follows: encompasses publications by practicing librarians who are or were employed at SUNY during any time since 1975; covers a time period form 1975 through 1987; and includes works published by commercial or university presses for national, state, or regional distribution. Seven broad categories of materials are provided: books, chapters in books, ERIC documents, journal articles, non-print materials, reviews, and editorial responsibilities. Author and subject indexes are provided. (CGD)

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The compilers wish to acknowledge the research support of the New York State/United University Professions Quality of Working Life and Professional Development Committee, whose grant made this project possible.

Thanks are also due to the members of the Professional Development Committee of SUNYLA, Helen Smirensky, Sylvia Chu, and Linda Arnold, who assisted with the initial information collection process.

Finally, special thanks go to Penelope Hanson, a student at SUNY Geneseo, for her tireless efforts in providing expert and enjoyable clerical assistance throughout the project.

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography of publications by SUNY librarians has been compiled for three primary reasons:

1) to provide a tangible record, for ourselves and for the larger SUNY community, of the depth and breadth of knowledge, interests, and expertise represented within our ranks;
2) to provide a mechanism which encourages SUNY librarians to share with each other their research interests and accomplishments;
3) to update the last bibliography, which was compiled in 1975 by the Publications Committee of the State University of New York Librarians Association.

The bibliography is based on information received from SUNY librarians in response to an April, 1987 mailing which requested citations for publications. We want to stress that this is a product based on these submissions, and should therefore be considered representative, not comprehensive. Not every citation has been verified, and annotations have been included only for those entries where the contributors supplied them. We would welcome corrections or additional entries for a revised edition, if needed, at the end of 1988. We also propose that the organization consider a more systematic way of tracking this information on an annual basis.

The scope of the bibliography is as follows:

1) It includes publications by practicing librarians who are or were employed at SUNY during any time since 1975. In general, publications by librarians serving as faculty members for the various graduate programs in library science have not been included unless the person also held a library position.

2) The time period covered is from 1975 (the closing date of the last bibliography) through 1987. There are a small number of entries which have 1988 dates as as result of "in press" submissions changing to an "in print" status during the compilation process.

3) Types of material accepted for inclusion are works published by commercial or university presses for national, state, or regional distribution. Unless they are available as ERIC documents, or have easily-retrievable OCLC records, materials produced for local campus use, such as library guides, local surveys, and newsletter articles have generally been excluded.

This bibliography has not been designed to include only scholarly materials. Rather, it should be used as a guide to the many kinds of creative expression that SUNY librarians have found in practicing their craft.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

This bibliography was compiled using Pro-Cite, Version 1.3, a bibliographic database management program available from Personal Bibliographic Software, Inc. Designed by librarians, this software package includes a choice of punctuation styles, e.g., Chicago, APA, MLA, ANSI, etc., as well as authority file and indexing capabilities. Since we had specified that entries be submitted in the Chicago style, we have attempted to stay within the spirit, if not always the letter, of those guidelines. In the case of joint authors, SUNY names are listed first. The author index at the back of the bibliography should always be used to find all publications by a particular author, since cross-references do not exist, either within or between sections. There is also a simple subject index at the end of the bibliography.

Materials have been grouped into the following broad categories:

I. BOOKS: Includes authored and edited books, dissertations, and miscellaneous short monographs.

II. CHAPTERS IN BOOKS: Includes chapters in books and conference proceedings; signed articles in reference works such as encyclopedias and dictionaries; and articles in annuals and yearbooks.

III. ERIC DOCUMENTS: Includes materials that have been assigned an ED number, regardless of publication type.

IV. JOURNAL ARTICLES: Includes articles published in journals, as well as limited coverage of some newsletter articles when appropriate.

V. NON-PRINT SOURCES: Includes a variety of formats: slides, videos, microform, liner notes for albums, computer programs.

VI. REVIEWS: Includes notices of general book and software reviewing assignments, plus individual citations for article-length reviews more than 1 page in length. Entries in this category have not been included in the subject index.

VII. EDITORIAL RESPONSIBILITES: Includes notices of responsibility for particular editorial assignments and special projects, including journals, newsletters, and on-going columns; abstracting responsibilities; indexing projects.

    An annotated bibliography of Chinese library literature from 1936-1984. It includes materials primarily in English published both inside and outside China, and covers Chinese libraries and librarianship -- except for matters peculiar to Taiwan and Hong Kong. Besides materials on library and information science, related topics such as books, publishing, documentation, and archives are included. Entries are organized in nine major categories according to their subject matter, and further divided into sub-categories. Appended with a list of current Chinese journals in library and information science, with dates of their first issue. An author/title index is also provided.

61. Lincoln, Betty Woelk. Festschriften in Art History, 1960-1975. New York: Garland Publishing, 1988.

    Included in the Garland Reference Library of the Humanities, the book contains in-depth subject analysis of 4676 essays by 3099 authors found in 344 Festschriften published in all European languages, 1960-1975. The book fills the lacuna between Paul Rave's bibliography Kunstgeschichte in Festschriften (Berlin, 1962) and the indexing begun by RILA (Repertoire International de la Literature de l'Art) in 1975. The bibliography section includes complete contents (author, title, pagination). There are also indexes of contributors and of honorees.

JOURNAL ARTICLES

301. Allen, Karen Miller. "Fur, Feathers, and Fins: Recommended Reading." The Serials Librarian 11, 2 (October 1986): 51-56.

Animals have been friends and companions to people for at least a hundred centuries, and both people and animals have profited from this relationship. A selected, annotated list of especially outstanding magazines about pets is provided for libraries interested in acquiring publications for pet enthusiasts.

302. Allen, Karen Miller. "The Human-Animal Bond." The Harvard Medical School Mental Health Letter 3, 2 (August 1986): 5-6.

Provides an evaluative overview of research that has investigated therapeutic uses of the relationship between people and pets. Emphasis is on the depressed chronically ill, prisoners in psychiatric hospitals, the institutionalized aged, and emotionally disturbed children.

303. Allen, Karen Miller. "Therapy, Health Maintenance, and the Human-Animal Bond." Veterinary Medicine and Small Animal Clinician 78 (1983): 893-899.

Provides an annotated bibliography about human-animal bond research of special interest to veterinarians.

306. Atkinson, Steven D. "Paragraph Qualification: A Search Approach with BRS Search System Features." Online 7, 1 (January 1983): 39-47.

Discusses paragraph qualification, a search strategy used to retrieve information from computerized databases. Positive and negative paragraph qualification, after-the-fact qualification, multifile searching, and free text searching are described, using examples from the Bibliographic Retrieval Services (BRS)/Search System.

307. Atkinson, Steven D. "Zero Result Online Searches." Online 10, 3 (May 1986): 59-66.

Based on manual observation of 187 zero result online searches at a university library, this article addresses three types of problems that can produce such search results: multiple database searching, topic negotiation, and database availability. A summary of conceptual and practical recommendations for searchers is provided. (6 references). (EJS).

308. Atkinson, Steven D., and Donna R. Dolan. "In Search of Research Studies in Online Databases." Online 7, 3 (March 1983): 51-63.

Suggests strategies for online searching of user requests for research studies on five major databases: BIOSIS, ERIC, MEDLINE, PSYCINFO, and the National Clearinghouse for Mental Health (NCMH). Special research limitations, locating criticism or support proposal for an ideal database, and a study of controlled terms across databases are included.

309. Atkinson, Steven D., and Michael Knee. "Managing Database Information: An Index to Online Databases." The Reference Librarian no. 18 (1987): 279-290.

The University Libraries Computer Search Service (State University of New York at Albany, SUNYA) provides access to databases from many vendors including BRS, Dialog, Wilsonline, CA Search, and Westlaw. To facilitate the use of these vendor services and more than 250 databases, a customized subject index was prepared to aid in the selection of databases for retrospective searches, end user searches, and ready reference use of online databases.

310. Atkinson, Steven D., Michael Knee, and Steven G. Watkins. "The Osborne Executive for Indexing, Accounting, and Information Management." Small Computers in Libraries 5, 10 (November 1985): 24-27.

Outlines three applications of a microcomputer utilizing a database management system, Personal Pearl, and a word processing software, Wordstar. The projects include: (1) fund accounting for discretionary allocations by bibliographer; (2) Index to the Albany Times Union; and (3) price estimates for databases available through Computer Search Service.

311. Atkinson, Steven D., and Steven G. Watkins. "Managing Database Information: A Microcomputer Application in a Computer Search." Online 9, 1 (January 1985): 47-52.

Describes method of keeping track of search service and database changes through use of database information files stored on microcomputer in use at Computer Search Service, State University of New York at Albany. System configuration, file structure, data input forms, system reports, database fact sheets, and search service brochure are highlighted.

316. Benedict, Marjorie A. "U.S. Doctoral Research on Women in French Literature. Part I: Women Authors and their Works." Women Studies Abstracts 11 (Fall 1982): 1-19.

A compilation of dissertations on women writers and their works covering the years 1894-1980. Arrangement is chronological by literary period; within each period, entries are arranged alphabetically by author-subjects.

317. Benedict, Marjorie A. "U.S. Doctoral Research on Women in French Literature. Part II: Other Authors." Women Studies Abstracts 11 (Winter 1982/83): 1-12.

A compilation of dissertations in which women are the focus of literary research in works by men or anonymous authors, covering the years 1894-1980. Arrangement is chronological by literary period with entries arranged alphabetically by author-subject within time periods.

318. Benedict, Marjorie A., Jacquelyn Gavryck, and Hanan C. Selvin. "Status of Academic Librarians in New York State." College and Research Libraries 44 (January 1983): 12-19.

A questionnaire was sent to every accredited higher education institution in New York State. Questions centered on: demographics; status of librarians according to controlling bodies and/or unions; match of responsibilities and benefits to those outlined in the ACRL Faculty-Status document. Statistical reporting reveals that, in general, the less research-oriented the institution, the more likely the librarians are to have "full" faculty status. Conversely, the least faculty status is held by librarians in institutions where the teaching faculty are members of one of the traditional professions, law, medicine, ministry.

The nature of community college libraries is such that student assistants working in them have a more complicated job than students who work in other types of academic libraries. A handbook of procedures is vital to the task of training these students. How one such handbook was organized, and the multiple value it had to the library, is expressed in the narration of one librarian's experience.

403. Feinberg, Richard, and Christine King. "Short-Term Library Skill Competencies: Arguing For the Achievable." College and Research Libraries 49 (1988): 24-28.

Leaders in the bibliographic instruction field advocate high performance standards for librarians and students involved in the library use education process. The focus of these standards has shifted over time; however, today librarians are urged to teach at extremely dynamic levels and students are encouraged, through this teaching, to become lifelong, expert library researchers. The authors of this article question the practical nature of these standards and affirm for themselves a simpler, more achievable set of goals and objectives. (abstract from C&RL).

419. Gavryck, Jacquelyn. "Applying Task Group Research to the Information Retrieval Interview." Behavioral and Social Sciences Librarian 2 (Winter 1981/Spring 1982): 31-37.

The author suggests that communication theory and research in studying task group interaction is highly relevant to studying the delegated computer search. When both parties are present, characteristics of "groupness" can develop in the 30 minutes to 2 hours such sessions usually last. Roles similiar to those in larger task groups are assumed by the participants on the basis of institutional status, subject expertise, system knowledge, interpersonal skills, interviewing techniques. Role fluctuations in repeat visits are common as factors change.

420. Gavryck, Jacquelyn. "Information Research Skills: Sharing the Burden." Wilson Library Bulletin 60 (May 1986): 22-24.

Despite pressure from statewide education departments and planning boards, secondary school teachers and librarians have staff shortages and lack of local administrative support to contend with in delivering a mandated research skills curriculum. Local colleges can help. Many area programs of cooperative bibliographic instruction have been developed across the U.S. SUNY Albany's program, called Bridging the Gap, is described.

421. Gavryck, Jacquelyn. "Library Instruction for Clerical Staff: The Rest of the Iceberg." Journal of Academic Librarianship 11 (January 1986): 343-345.

It's suggested that bibliographic instruction librarians be consulted in planning clerical staff in-service training sessions and workshops. Such training should begin with needs assessment and should end with evaluation. Support and input from departmental and unit administrators is crucial to success. A year-long program at SUNY Albany is described from planning through delivery and evaluation in which a pre-test was used as a needs assessment instrument.

422. Gavryck, Jacquelyn. "The SUNY Librarians' Faculty Status Game." Journal of Academic Librarianship 1 (March 1975): 11-13.

The author describes the early history of the SUNY librarians' struggle for faculty status. To support her efforts to gain state-wide University Senate approval of a resolution to support full faculty status for librarians, she enlisted the help of SUNYLA (State University of New York Librarians Association) campus delegates to collect data, particularly on academic titles, salaries, education and scholarship to support the group's image as faculty-like. The data is still useful as a "snapshot" of nearly 500 academic librarians in the mid-70's and as a basis for comparison with the same group today.

423. Gavryck, Jacquelyn. "Using the ERIC Thesaurus to Teach Concept Identification." Online 4 (January 1980): 31-34.

A method is described through which the subject of a computer search is analyzed, factors are listed, ERIC descriptors are found to correspond to each factor, and the statement is reassembled as a formulation in which Boolean operators become the "action words," similiar to verbs. The entire process bears striking resemblance to the grammatical process called "sentence diagramming".

They suggest what decisions about updating responsibility and printing production must be made as a useful in-house publications policy takes shape. They use the act of developing such a policy as a guide to administrative decision-making.

458. Hudson, Judith. "Bibliographic Record Maintenance in the Online Environment." Information Technology and Libraries 3 (December 1984): 388-393.

Methods used for maintaining bibliographic records in the online catalog are compared with methods in the conventional card catalog for five components of bibliographic maintenance: addition of bibliographic records to the catalog, identification and correction of errors, application of authority control, addition of information to the records and withdrawal of records from the catalog. Those procedures which are most similiar in both the online catalog and the card catalog relate to the evaluation of data contained within the record; those procedures which are most different relate to the manner in which information is stored and displayed in the two types of systems. The impact of the implementation of an online catalog on bibliographic record maintenance operations is discussed.

459. Hudson, Judith. "Cataloging for the Local Online System." Information Technology and Libraries 5 (March 1986): 5-27.

Cataloging operations at six university libraries that have implemented local automated systems were observed. Each automated system is described as it relates to the cataloging process. Authority control, catalog maintenance, decentralization of original cataloging and other technical services functions, enhanced public access to materials, and quality control are the areas that have been affected most. The article concludes with some suggestions for cataloging departments planning for an online system.

460. Hudson, Judith. "Copy Cataloging Activities: Report of a Survey." Cataloging & Classification Quarterly 7 (Fall 1986): 63-67.

Results of a survey of copy cataloging activities are reported. The survey covered the areas of staffing, training, evaluation, time spent on copy cataloging, authority work, quality control, performance standards, and the effects of an online catalog.

461. Hudson, Judith. "On-the-Job Training for Cataloging and Classification." Cataloging and Classification Quarterly 7 (Summer 1987): 69-78.

Training for cataloging and classification within the Cataloging Department is discussed for two levels of staff, copy catalogers, and original catalogers. A general pattern which moves from learning to catalog straightforward materials which require minimal editing to processing materials which are progressively more complex is described for copy catalogers. A survey of heads of cataloging departments reveals that there is a general feeling that cataloging and classification are being shortchanged in library school training, and recommendations for such training are made. Training programs for original catalogers also follow a pattern, from working with LC copy to preparing original cataloging records. Some variations to the training patterns for each group are noted. The article concludes with a discussion of continuing education for each group.

462. Hudson, Judith. "Revisions to Contributed Cataloging in a Cooperative Cataloging Data Base." Journal of Library Automation 14 (June 1981): 116-120.

Cataloging records constructed and input into a national computerized data base of standardized bibliographic information were analyzed in an effort to emphasize the importance of standardization and effective quality control on the part of contributing libraries. Influences for change which will lead to the inclusion of cataloging records of higher quality were identified and improvements to the system were recommended.

The article reports on a program at the Univeristy of Delaware which financed half of the online bibliographic searching costs for undergraduates and graduate students in an attempt to study their use of these services. The study found that the searches made by students were indistinguishable from those done by faculty. Student evaluations showed that most students felt the searches were of great value and almost all would use online services again.

A comprehensive bibliographic tool tailored principally to meet the needs of music acquisition librarians and music scholars. Entries are organized by title and include historical and informational notes in much the same format as appears in the five-volume set Union List of Serials in Libraries of the United States and Canada. The collation lists first microforms, then reprints, showing publisher, range of years and volumes available, kind of microfilm, polarity of microfilm, cloth or paper reprint, cost, and other pertinent notes. Publishers' series (such as historical sets, anthologies, monuments of music, and collected works), and monographic series are excluded. However, annuals, almanacs, yearbooks, and irregular serials are included. A list of publishers cited is given.

419. Gavryck, Jacquelyn. "Applying Task Group Research to the Information Retrieval Interview." Behavioral and Social Sciences Librarian 2 (Winter 1981/Spring 1982): 31-37.

The author suggests that communication theory and research in studying task group interaction is highly relevant to studying the delegated computer search. When both parties are present, characteristics of "groupness" can develop in the 30 minutes to 2 hours such sessions usually last. Roles similiar to those in larger task groups are assumed by the participants on the basis of institutional status, subject expertise, system knowledge, interpersonal skills, interviewing techniques. Role fluctuations in repeat visits are common as factors change.

420. Gavryck, Jacquelyn. "Information Research Skills: Sharing the Burden." Wilson Library Bulletin 60 (May 1986): 22-24.

Despite pressure from statewide education departments and planning boards, secondary school teachers and librarians have staff shortages and lack of local administrative support to contend with in delivering a mandated research skills curriculum. Local colleges can help. Many area programs of cooperative bibliographic instruction have been developed across the U.S. SUNY Albany's program, called Bridging the Gap, is described.

421. Gavryck, Jacquelyn. "Library Instruction for Clerical Staff: The Rest of the Iceberg." Journal of Academic Librarianship 11 (January 1986): 343-345.

It's suggested that bibliographic instruction librarians be consulted in planning clerical staff in-service training sessions and workshops. Such training should begin with needs assessment and should end with evaluation. Support and input from departmental and unit administrators is crucial to success. A year-long program at SUNY Albany is described from planning through delivery and evaluation in which a pre-test was used as a needs assessment instrument.

422. Gavryck, Jacquelyn. "The SUNY Librarians' Faculty Status Game." Journal of Academic Librarianship 1 (March 1975): 11-13.

The author describes the early history of the SUNY librarians' struggle for faculty status. To support her efforts to gain state-wide University Senate approval of a resolution to support full faculty status for librarians, she enlisted the help of SUNYLA (State University of New York Librarians Association) campus delegates to collect data, particularly on academic titles, salaries, education and scholarship to support the group's image as faculty-like. The data is still useful as a "snapshot" of nearly 500 academic librarians in the mid-70's and as a basis for comparison with the same group today.

423. Gavryck, Jacquelyn. "Using the ERIC Thesaurus to Teach Concept Identification." Online 4 (January 1980): 31-34.

A method is described through which the subject of a computer search is analyzed, factors are listed, ERIC descriptors are found to correspond to each factor, and the statement is reassembled as a formulation in which Boolean operators become the "action words," similiar to verbs. The entire process bears striking resemblance to the grammatical process called "sentence diagramming".

424. Gavryck, Jacquelyn, and Deborah Masters. "Reaching the Community-Based Returning Woman Student: The Academic Role." CLIC Quarterly 1 (December 1982): 12-14.

"Returning" students, because they are usually fitting education into busy lives, offer a challenge to the traditional bibliographic instruction program. Based on their experiences in providing such a program through various modes, the authors offer advice about individualizing such instruction.

425. Gavryck, Jacquelyn, and Ruth Peabody. "Shaping the Library's In-House Publications Policy." Wilson Library Bulletin 54 (December 1979): 230-235.

The authors identify the problems which often exist in developing and maintaining library-produced bibliographies and user aids. They suggest what decisions about updating responsibility and printing production must be made as a useful in-house publications policy takes shape. They use the act of developing such a policy as a guide to administrative decision-making.

The perpetual problem of dealing with bookdealers and publishers is explored. An at least partial solution is suggested by way of sending bibliographically correct orders to the most appropriate dealers. Set time periods for cancelations, claiming and reporting at regular intervals is also helpful.

624. Safran, Franciska K. "Dutch Land Holdings and the Settlement of Northwestern Pennsylvannia." Stepping Stones 29 (May/June 1985): 1078-1083.

Part one contains a short history of the Holland Land Company's struggle of selling land under the strict Settlement Acts in the Commonwealth. Part two describes the ARCHIVES OF THE HOLLAND LAND COMPANY, specifically the groups of documents pertaining to the Northwestern Pennsylvannia region. Technicalities of the microfilming project are also discussed.

625. Safran, Franciska K. "Facsimile Printing of Historical Colored Maps." Information Bulletin 17 (March 1986): 112-122.

A short introduction of the evolution of map printing from woodcuts to microcartography is followed by the description of the ARCHIVES OF THE HOLLAND LAND COMPANY. Then the historical significance of the four colored maps that were selected for printing is explained. The reproduction technique at Monro Litho in Rochester, N.Y. with several encountered difficulties and solution to the problems is discussed. An additional page on the Holland Land Company Manuscript Preservation Project by the Editor of the Bulletin is also included.

Examines the extent to which Superintendent of Documents Classification numbers reflect "source of origin" for the documents classified. Three aspects of the situation are covered: hierarchy, specificity, and stability. Found that the SuDoc system is archival but not hierarchical, suffers from a lack of specificity, but is a remarkably stable and useful classification scheme for documents.
